PREFACE.

The compilation of this volume has required considerable statistical research. The records of the county and other authorities available have been diligently searched to obtain the information contained herein. All matter of a statistical character has been carefully verified and will be found correct, barring such mistakes as are likely to occur in dealing with figures. Historical data has been obtained from sources considered reliable, and, while not exhaustive, it is believed will prove interesting. The directory feature, of course, must of necessity in time lose some of its present accuracy.

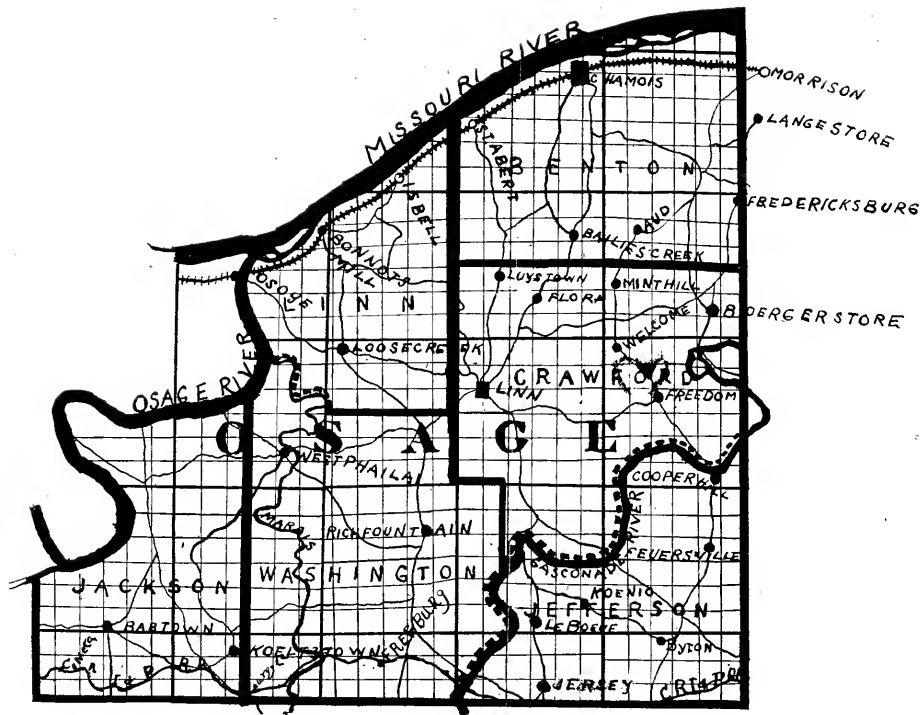

It has not been the purpose of the compiler of this book to produce a voluminous or exhaustive work, nor does this volume represent an effort on the part of the compiler at literary achievement. It is a plain presentation of local statistics and historical data which, it is believed, will prove interesting and useful. The professional and business men represented herein have contributed in a large measure to the production of this book, and to them is hereby made public acknowledgment of thanks.

C. J. VAUGHAN, Compiler.

OSAGE COUNTY.

Osage county is in Central Missouri. St. Louis, the metropolis of the Mississippi Valley, is 85 miles from the eastern border. Jefferson City, the capital of the State, is 10 miles from the western boundary. The physical boundaries of the county are the Osage on the west, the Missouri on the north, while the meanderings of the Gasconade establishes in part the boundary on the east. Maries county lies just south. The county has an area of 375,336 acres and a population, according to the census of 1910, of 14,283 people.

The predominating geological formations are limestone and sandstone. Lead, coal, kaolin and iron ore have been discovered in various parts of the county, but not in quantities sufficient to hazard the cost of an attempt at commercial development. Topographically considered, the county shows the effect of the glacial period. Hills and valleys of irregular formations stretch in all directions. The strata of rock, irregular in position, shows the result of the upheaval. The main watershed is an irregular promontory stretching from the Maries county line to the Missouri river. Diverging from this mainland are numerous lesser watersheds, feeding tributaries of the Osage and Gasconade rivers. The great bluffs overlooking the larger and smaller streams are objects of scenic interest and beauty. Rising precipitously hundreds of feet above the streams at their base, they are majestic in their proportions. They are practically unexplored, notwithstanding that industry has for years been carried on about them. Nature has dealt lavishly in forming a landscape of beauty. Prodigious hills and fertile valleys ever delight the eye with scenic variations. Rome's seven hills, celebrated in literary metaphor, are abashed by the seventy and seven hills of Osage. Nature shows a curious and interesting workmanship. Some formations suggest the spectacular and delightful Alps, while nestling at their base are fertile valleys, yielding abundantly blade and grain in response to human industry. Nowhere in all the vast expanse of the American continent can be found a country of equal area yielding products, domestic and natural, of greater variety. The oak, sycamore, cottonwood, elm, ash, walnut and hickory are the natural product of hill and valley. Civilization introduced a variety of domestic products which yield their rich portion in season. Not only does the topography of the county and the varied character of its soil permit the production of a variety of staple articles, but nature well adapted all elements to the first requirements of the pioneer. The numerous streams abounded with fish, the woods with game and the hills and valleys with wild fruit. These, with crystal springs of never-failing water, fulfilled the pioneer's vision of an earthly paradise. While making conquest of the forest and laying the foundation for the more improved civilization to follow, nature yielded abundantly to the wants of the early settler. True, the valleys, covered with a growth of luxuriant oak, about which were dense hanging foliage, spread malaria in his path. Even the residents of the high hills escaped not the unsparing ravages of disease peculiar to an undeveloped country. Owing to the nature of the country it yielded stubbornly to conquest. The sturdy settler battled heroically with his new environments, making progress by slow and difficult stages.

Life in Osage county in the pioneer days was typical of that in the colonial period. Log houses with puncheon floors sufficed the needs of the early settler. The more prosperous of that period lived in two-room log houses, with an entry between. All houses had their celebrated fireplaces, these at one end of the building. Huge rock chimneys on the outside carried away the great volume of smoke. Home life was simple and hospitality was the predominating virtue. The early settler was not harassed by the Indian as was his Virginia forebears. Ere settlement was made here the Indian had moved further west and south. The first white settlers were in exclusive control of the territory. Prior to occupancy of the land by the whites, the Osage, Shawnee and Delaware Indians inhabited the country. Before them were the mound builders, who, from evidences now apparent, must have numerously populated this region. Interested parties have made excavations and found skeletons and stone implements peculiar to that prehistoric race. A regularity of earth formations in Benton township, south of Chamois, indicate that the mound builders resided there in great numbers. These formations have both the appearances of natural and artificial creation. Their vast size suggests the difficulty of artificial construction, while their regularity gives almost positive assurance that they are not the work of nature.

SETTLEMENT.

The first settlers in Osage county were the French near Cote Sans Dessein, near the present site of Bonnots Mill, where they established trading posts with the Indians, with whom they were much thrown in social intercourse. History gives us no particulars of their crude form of social government, but tradition informs us that they lived a life of social merriment in which the peaceable Indian participated. This was about the beginning of the nineteenth century. The gradual encroachment of the Missouri river upon the settlers village dispersed them and they moved to points more remote in the interior of the county and by degrees familiarized themselves with the processes of farming. The great overflow of 1844 drove the last resident from French Village and the town ceased to exist. Thereafter Dauphine—now Bonnots Mill—was established.

About the year 1833 a colony of educated Westphalians located in the western part of the county on the big and little Maries. These sturdy characters were ambitious to establish institutions of learning in the new country. They were devout Catholics and aspired to give to the world an example of devotion to faith by establishing institutions of learning calculated to promote the growth of their religion. They made a map of the Osage and Maries region, showing the location of settlers' farms, roads and other places then regarded of importance. The beautiful town of Westphalia was established by them, which became their headquarters and to which immigration from the fatherland poured in. They were an industrious people who prospered in the new land of their adoption.

The first of the American-born immigrants were Virginians, who settled in the interior of the county on land adapted to the growth of tobacco. They selected the high hills, rejecting the more fertile valley land which could have been obtained at no greater cost. They were a peaceable people who, while not indolent, took life easy. Their environments were adapted to the full enjoyment of their tastes. The fox chase was a community affair in which success was evidence of valor or failure, humiliation. The tables were well supplied with venison, the skin of the deer being converted into buckskin trousers, a staple garment in those days. All domestic services were performed by the women, who procured wood and water and often solved the vexatious problem of supplying, by ingenious preparation of materials at hand, the table wants of the family.

These conditions had established themselves without serious consideration of the respective duties of the sexes. The early settler answered the call of the wild as the first law of his nature. He was not disturbed with ethical problems of home life further than to require morality and virtue in the home. If the women performed more than their share of work, their endurance was regarded as proof that not too much had been required. No Lochinvar could woo with greater ardor than the sturdy young suitor of that period, but once having acquired possession of the object of his affection, he reverted to type and lived true to the example set by the fathers.

While there was apparent a palpable inequality in the domestic requirements of the sexes of that early day, yet the men were not lacking in respect and affection for the women. The domestic structure was the creation of long custom. With no pretension to aesthetic tastes, they accepted without question the perfect idealism of their primitive conditions. They were jealous of any invasion that threatened established customs. The head of the family concerned himself with the work which the mother of the family could not perform. His duties were to annually clear additional land, put in the crop and cultivate it. But these duties were not permitted to interfere with his pleasures. He could discern with fine discrimination the favorable or unfavorable signs of the weather for fishing, and always yielded to his native impulses in matters of this character. The summer months afforded him much delight on the banks of streams, where he kept tense vigil at his lines. During the winter months he spent much of his time in the woods in quest of game, and he demonstrated prowess with the crude firearms he possessed. The rifle, loaded at the muzzle, was the chief implement of execution. Occupying a place of high esteem was the long-eared, deep bass-voiced hound, whose endurance was a quality of admiration. That hound that laid out in the chase or was outdistanced by the others subjected himself to speedy dispatch. No man in the community dared venture the humiliation of the ownership of a hound that shirked in the chase. In fact, he craved no higher honors than the distinction of owning the best pack in the community.

But the provincialism of the earlier day has been succeeded by the history of the present—an era of progress, prosperity and culture, an expression of the red blood and indomitable character of the early settlers. Improved farms, the best breeds of horses and cattle, and the adaptation of scientific methods in farming are everywhere evident in rural life. Churches and schools dot the hills and valleys of the county, whereby is reflected an advance in social life and culture.

The public affairs of the county have been economically and honestly administered, and neither suspicion or scandal has been directed at a public official. The mass of the people are intelligent, honest and industrious, and the general effort is towards industrial progress and a higher idealism.

MILITARY.

Osage county has always furnished her full quota of patriotic men when the nation demanded their services. We recall but one who served in the war of 1812—Major Jesse Evans. Col. Adam Miller, whose name was a household word in Osage county, and who was intimately identified with her material interests, served in the Seminole Indian war in Florida.

The Mexican war was the signal for a ready and enthusiastic response on the part of the leading citizens of the county. J. W. Hawkins, militia colonel, called a meeting at Linn in June 1846. An organization was effected with August Rainey as captain and John Scott first lieutenant. Capt. Rainey's company went to Fort Leavenworth, where it remained six weeks and, not being needed, returned home. Captain Rainey died on his return home and William Reynolds, one of the company who became a major, died later while in the service.

At the outbreak of the Civil war Osage county had more slaves than any territory of equal area between the Osage and Meramec. In 1860 there were over 200 slaves in the county, and the richest slave-owner in the whole region resided in Osage county.

After the election of President Lincoln, Osage county became much interested in Civil war issues. J. W. Blount was representative of the county in the State Legislature and was a supporter of Gov. Claiborne Jackson's war policy, a position out of harmony with the prevailing sentiment of the representative men of all parties in the county.

The Home Guard movement had its birth in the summer of 1861. The mission of this organization was to protect public property, bridges and railroads and facilitate the operations of federal troops. Capt. J. K. Kidd formed the first Home Guards at Cooper Hill, and later Medora became general headquarters. Among the captains of Home Guards were John and Henry Burnett, J. W. Glover, Sam Miller, Felix Bonnot and W. W. Price. Contemporaneous with these organizations was the formation of State Guards, under direction of Governor Jackson, by J. T. Berry, who was appointed enrolling officer for Osage county. Governor Jackson's withdrawal from the State capital led to the gradual dispersion of these men, some joining the confederate forces and others going into the federal militia or regular troops.

In August, 1861, Capt. J. K. Kidd organized the Osage Independent Mounted Rifle Company, which he took to St. Louis. In the fall of 1861, Col. George B. Boomer of Castle Rock recruited, from the Home Guards, the Twenty-sixth Missouri Volunteer Infantry. This regiment distinguished itself for bravery and its commander, Colonel Boomer, was a conspicuous and valiant leader in many memorable combats. Today his name occupies a position of high esteem in the hearts of the old soldiers, and to his memory there is accorded a reverence singularly profound and grateful. The local Grand Army of the Republic organization takes its name from him.

In 1862 Col. Adam Miller, who was enrolling officer for Osage county, began the formation of militia companies. The first enrolled was Company A, under Captain David Hopkins. Company B was also enrolled at Linn under Captain Marion Davis. Then followed the organization at Linn of Company C, E. W. Anderson, Captain; Company D, J. W. Williams, captain; Company E, Mat Stieffermann, captain; Company F, P. J. Combey, captain; at Westphalia Company G, S. Borgmeyer, captain; at Koeltztown Company H, H. Strobach, captain; at Linn, Company I, J. C. Dessieux, captain; at Westphalia, Company J, George Laverenz, captain; at Linn, Company K, D. C. Duncan, captain; Company L, G. J. McKnight, captain. David Hopkins of Company A first had general administrative control of the companies, but dissatisfaction arising from his radical rule, Col. L. Zevely was placed in charge, whose vigorous yet just policy restored harmony among the men and peace in the county. Many of those composing these companies originally served in Governor Jackson's State Guards. This militia organization was subject to federal orders, but its chief duty was to guard the lines of transportation in the county. Medora, originally headquarters of the Home Guards, surrendered its military prestige to Linn, which afterward became the center of the Home Guards organization.

The years 1861-62 were productive of much bitterness and frequent troubles. Assailed by disturbers within and marauders from without, Osage county experienced its share of war history. General Price, in his famous raid from St. Louis to Jefferson City, invaded the county in October 1864. His army, driven to desperation by want, and hardened by years of warfare, plundered as they went, taking the best horses and plundering homes of all articles that were of value. Little food was left in the country after Price's invasion.

The Home Guards were under Maj. Chesley Glover, a man of broad sympathies, loyal patriotism and unquestioned integrity. This organization was subject to orders from Rolla and Pacific. Gradually it was absorbed by the regular troops and the enrolled militia, which latter organization was formed at Linn in the fall of 1862, with L. Zevely, colonel; Adam Miller, lieutenant-colonel; W. J. Williams, major, and August Kleinsorge, adjutant.

The Thirty-third Missouri Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Col. C. B. Fiske; the Sixth and Tenth Cavalry Volunteers, with some Iowa regiments, embraced 456 men from Osage county. There were 181 in the Twenty-sixth, 102 in the Iowa troops and 120 men, organized at Linn August, 1864, in the Forty-eighth Missouri Volunteer Infantry.

Osage county passed through the reconstruction period with considerable agitation, but without serious overt acts. Oaths of loyalty, dispossession of office and disfranchisement of voters instituted an unpopular regime, which, however, gradually gave way to more tolerant and charitable rule.

During the Spanish-American war Osage county supplied a number of young volunteers for the army, some of whom saw active service. A company was organized at Linn in the summer of 1898, J. C. Von Arx being elected captain and Hermann Tillman first lieutenant. This company endeavored to get into the service, but, not being needed, did not get into the field. The company was organized independent of orders, hence was not a recognized military organization.

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

The first courthouse erected in Osage county was in 1843 at a cost of $3,420.79. The contract for the building of the second courthouse was let in 1872 at a cost of $28,993.41. This building was completed in 1874; destroyed by fire Sunday night November 15, 1880, and rebuilt at a cost of $13,000.

The first jail erected in Osage county was in 1844 at a cost of $133.14. The present building was erected in 1858 at a cost of $2,560.

The county poor farm was created in 1853 with 108 acres. The present building was erected in 1893 at a cost of $4,550. The present farm consists of ten acres.

Contract for the erection of the bridge across Doolin's creek, near Chamois, in sum of $685, was let August 20, 1890.

The contract for the erection of the bridge across Loose creek, near Isbell, in sum of $4,000, was let August 17, 1891.

The contract for the erection of the bridge across the Maries creek, near Westphalia, was let November 22, 1892. Bridge was built in 1893. Contract price, $14,000.

The contract for the erection of the bridges across Swan creek and the Gasconade river at or near Rollins' ferry in sum of $12,440, was let June 29, 1897. Bridge was completed in 1898.

CITIES AND TOWNS.

LINN.

Linn was created by the County Court of Osage County in 1842, when that body appointed John Scott county seat commissioner and ordered that the county seat be known and styled as "Linnville". Later the town was called Linn in honor of United States Senator Linn of Missouri, a distinguished physician and popular statesman.

Some facts that the compiler of this volume has obtained from the county court records follow:

February 14, 1842, John Scott, commissioner, was ordered to plat town and sell lots on "credit of twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months" and instructed to sell no lot for less than $10. May 8, 1843, the commissioner's report was received and ordered recorded. On the same day Henry Zurnegeda, surveyor, filed his report of the survey of the town. On the succeeding day it was ordered by the court that thereafter all terms of court be held at Linn, except the next one, which was to be held at Van Buren, then the meeting place of the court.

In pursuance of an order of the court made at its May term, 1843, the first session of the county court held at Linn was on August 14, 1843. Thereafter Linn became the permanent county seat. An ineffectual effort was made by M. C. Davis, through his attorney, in February, 1844, to move the county seat back to Van Buren; but the court, upon investigation of the petition for removal, found that not two-thirds of the taxable inhabitants of the county had signed the petition, therefore the matter was dismissed. At the same term of court, George Crutsinger, superintendent of public buildings, filed plans and specifications for a new courthouse, and reported the award of contract for its building, which the court approved.

The first dramshop license granted to a citizen of Linn was on August 14, 1842. The first authorized tavern keeper was Theo. Even, who was granted a license for that purpose by the county court February 14, 1844, upon payment of $10, to the State, and $12.50 to the county.

The first store in Linn was conducted by W. M. Lankin where the convent now stands. E. McJilton built the first frame house on the site of the Boillot postoffice building. The first brick house in Linn was erected by E. McJilton, the same being the one removed by John Feuers in 1913, and known as the Hopkins place. Southwest of the courthouse Burch & Young contractors, built a double log house which was used as a hotel. The "Linn Mansion," erected in 1849, was a pretentious building for its day and place, and was justly celebrated for the air of domesticity and hospitality which prevailed there.

The growth of the town has been by slow but substantial stages. Transportation, passenger and freight, has been, until recently, exclusively by hack and dray, Bonnots Mill being the shipping point. The improvement of the public roads, which has introduced automobiles, has greatly facilitated passenger service and placed the town in quick communication with the railroad.

Linn was incorporated as a village October 3, 1899, and remained so until October 11, 1911, when it was incorporated as a city of the fourth class.

The public utilities of the town are an electric light plant, incorporated, the stock of which is held by the citizens of the town; a central telephone system, with lines radiating to all points in the county and having connections with the Bell and Kinloch systems; the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, with an office in the city. The Osage County Fair Association grounds and buildings are located in East Linn. The Fair Association was permanently organized at Linn, December 29, 1906. March 23, 1907, the grounds, consisting of twelve acres, were purchased for $1,200. Articles of incorporation were granted March 18, 1907. Stock in the Fair Association is held by the people of the county generally. The Bank of Osage County was organized in the Farmers and Merchants Bank in 1913.

CHURCHES AND FRATERNITIES.

St. George's Church was organized at Linn by Father John B. Goeldin, S. J., in 1867. The first church building was erected in 1874. This was succeeded by the present building, which was erected in 1894. The convent building was completed in 1883. The first parsonage was built in 1874, and the present one in 1894.

The first Methodist Church was erected in 1874, an organization having been effected many years previously. Later this property, east of courthouse square, was sold and a half interest acquired in the Christian Church building, where the two congregations worshipped alternately. In 1905 the present building was completed. The church parsonage was bought in 1881.

The Christian congregation was a vigorous and active organization from 1880 to 1890. In 1880 the congregation built a church. Eventually the organization lost its identity and the trustees sold the church property. The membership has been, to a considerable extent, absorbed by the Methodists. Those who remain with the organization have transferred their membership to Fairview.

There are a few adherents of the Baptist denomination in the vicinity of Linn, but they have no church property or organization.

Linn Lodge No. 66, A. F. and A. M., was organized first in 1856; reorganized in 1898. The Odd Fellows Lodge was organized in 1860, the A. O. U. W. in 1890, the Modern Woodmen in 1895, and the Modern Brotherhood in 1908.

BONNOTS MILL.

Bonnots Mill, originally known as Dauphine, is near the site of old French Village, the first white settlement in Osage county. The town was laid out by Felix Bonnot in 1852, and although the town retained for several years the postoffice name of Dauphine, it was known as Bonnots Mill, taking its name from the founder of the first mill at the place, Mr. Bonnot. The town from its earliest history has been a very active commercial center, being located both on the Missouri river and the Missouri Pacific Railroad and the shipping point for Linn, Loose Creek, Frankenstein, Vosholl and a large agricultural territory.

The town possesses a traditional interest. The outgrowth of old French Village, it dates its ancestry back to a very early period. In its earlier history the steamboat trade was a great part of the life and activity of the town. Many of the earlier citizens of the town were investors in and promoters of steamship transportation. Closely allied with river navigation, the town has furnished many skilled pilots who have explored the "Big Muddy" from source to mouth.

Of its quasi-public institutions besides the railroad may be mentioned the Meyer-Morfeld Milling Company, owners of a merchant mill having a capacity of 75 barrels of flour and 80 of meal daily. The mill was established in 1887, remodeled in 1904, and equipped with gas engine and modern machinery in 1908.

The Bank of Bonnots Mill was established in 1905, with Alex Verdot as President, which position he still holds. Jos. F. Dubrouillet was the first cashier. He was succeeded in 1907, by A. P. Mertens, who is at present serving in that capacity.

The Catholic congregation acquired land for a church building in 1905, and built and dedicated a church in 1906. It is commandingly located on a high bluff overlooking the Missouri river. Rev. Chas. Even has served as pastor of the church from its establishment.

There is no Protestant church in the town. The Methodists have a small congregation, who are served by the Linn and Chamois charges.

The fraternities have been the A. F. and A. M., and the A. O. U. W., now extinct. A Modern Woodman camp and a Catholic society are in existence.

Math. Koetting is owner of one of the largest lumber yards in the county.

FRANKENSTEIN.

Frankenstein is three miles from Isbell, the nearest railroad point. The town is near the site of where Mary's Help Catholic Church stood, which was build in 1863. Previous to the construction of this log building the congregation worshipped at the home of Wm. Thoenen. Later a house of worship was erected on the land of Gottfried Franken and John Huesgen, about a mile north of where Frankenstein now stands.

The first store and postoffice at Frankenstein was conducted by Jos. W. Schrader, who was succeeded by Alex Koenigsfeld. The present large and commodious church building was erected in 1891 and dedicated in 1892. The first pastor was Rev. John Bachmier. A parochial school is maintained by the congregation. The town is located on a high hill and is surrounded by a progressive and wealthy agricultural population.

FREEBURG.

Freeburg, originally known by the postoffice name of Engelbert, was, until the building of the Rock Island Railroad, a very remote settlement. The first postmaster was Engelbert Franke, appointed in 1886. In 1888 the name of the place was changed to Frankberg. In 1894 Mr. Franke retired as postmaster and was succeeded by John Welschmeyer, who changed the name of the postoffice to Freeburg.

Adam Wieberg homesteaded the land on which most of the town is now located. The first business men of the town were John Welschmeyer, Engelbert Franke and Jos. Poettgen.

The St. Louis and Colorado Railroad, now the Rock Island, was built through, or rather under, the town in 1902. After the building of the railroad the growth of the town was rapid. December 26, 1903, Rev. Gerhard Fick was sent out by Archbishop J. J. Glennon to organize a Catholic parish. March 5, 1904, the present church building was completed. Under direction of Rev. Fick the school and sisters' house was built in 1904, the Ursuline sisters having charge of the parochial school. In 1907 the Catholic parsonage, beautiful in appearance and elegant in all its appointments, was erected.

The town has one bank, organized in 1905; one newspaper, the Freeburg Enterprise, established in 1903; two mills, one grain elevator, besides the ordinary commercial enterprises. The town was incorporated in 1909. The population of the town, according to the census of 1910 was 331.

LOOSE CREEK.

Loose Creek, originally known as Russellville, is one of the old towns of the county. August Pickineaud, a Frenchman, entered the land where Loose Creek is located in 1843. Wm. Muenks opened a store in 1845. The town was laid out by Surveyor Bovie in 1870.

The Church of the Immaculate Conception was organized by Father Helias, who in 1847 erected a log building for congregational worship, which was replaced by a brick building in 1867. The two-story frame convent building was built in 1876. The present elegant and imposing stone parsonage was erected in 1880. Loose Creek is populated almost exclusively by German people, whose thrift, industry and progressiveness is evident in the substantial homes in the town. An industrious and wealthy class of farmers, with elegant homes and fertile farms, adds to the general prosperity of the neighborhood.

John Theodore Lock, who came from Germany in 1841, established an ox mill in 1854, being one among the first mills in Osage county. Patrons of the mill came from many miles distant and would remain sometimes two or three days for their "grist." In 1858 Mr. Lock replaced the celebrated ox mill with one of steam.

MEDORA.

Medora, known also as St. Aubert, was named for the wife of its founder, J. M. Morrow, who laid out the town in 1855 and constructed the first house. About the time of the Civil war Medora was the metropolis of Osage county, and was the base of the military operations at that time. A union church, dedicated by the Methodists and Christians, was built in 1870.

HOPE.

Hope, formerly called Boeger's Store, dates its history back to 1834, when B. W. Duncan erected the first building on the site. The land was entered in 1849 by John C. Brim. In 1859 Simon Boeger put up the first store building, which was acquired by W. H. Brinkmann in 1886. Stock & Keisker established a blacksmith and wagon shop in 1876 and in 1885 Mr. Stock built a mill, now owned and operated by A. H. Heidbrader. The first schoolhouse was built in 1848. The majority of the people of Hope and vicinity belong to the German Presbyterian church, a mile or more distant from Hope.

RICH FOUNTAIN.

The land comprising the site of Rich Fountain was entered by John Burns in the 30's and later sold to John Struempf, who in 1839 built a water mill, which was superseded by an ox-tread mill, and this in 1856 by a steam mill, built by Peter Struempf. Father Helias named the place Rich Fountain because of the beautiful spring, famed in that whole section. Joseph Walter Schrader, a sturdy German character, moved to Rich Fountain in 1854, at which time there was a store, a blacksmith shop, a tailoring establishment, a shoemaker's shop and a saloon. Judge Henry Schrader opened a store in 1865 and was postmaster for more than twenty years.

The church of the Sacred Heart was organized by Father Helias in 1840. The old log church, built in 1840, was replaced by the present imposing limestone structure in 1879, and dedicated the following year. The stone convent building was built in 1887. The old log school building, erected in 1845, was replaced by a stone structure in 1868. A large, attractive and commodious stone building was built in 1904.

The Bank of Rich Fountain was organized in 1913 with a capital stock of $10,000. George Holtschneider is president and H. J. Fick is cashier.

LUYSTOWN.

Luystown derived its name from Andrew Luys, who entered the land where the village now stands. The town is located at the convergence of two beautiful and fertile valleys. It is seven miles from Isbell, the nearest railroad point.

The first store at Luystown was established by Louis Poncot about 1878. The business was later acquired by Wm. Meuser, and in 1894 by Mertens Bros. The store is now owned by Wm. Mertens. A mill was built by John Theo. Lock in 1884. In 1889 P. Jos. Lock and his brother, Arnold, and Alex Koenigsfeld bought the property. In 1903 P. Jos. Lock became exclusive owner of the mill, since which time he has conducted the business. P. M. H. Vasen established a blacksmith shop in 1882. A public school is located in the town. Those of the Catholic faith belong to the Frankenstein parish.

WESTPHALIA.

In 1835 German immigrants, in search of homes, located on the Maries, near the present site of Westphalia. Among the first settlers were the Hesse, Schroeder, Huber, Dr. Bruns, Grammatica, Nacke and Hoecker families, thirty-five persons in all.

In April, 1838, P. Helias, a Jesuit missionary, having been sent out to found a central mission, came up the Missouri river on a boat. Finding this mode of travel slow and tedious, the zealous missionary, with his trusted pony, pushed his way into the interior of the country and in May reached the little settlement on the banks of the Maries. Finding a little log church where the settlers worshipped, he determined to found a central mission. June 28, 1838, he entered into a contract with F. Geisberg for a forty-acre tract of land which that gentleman had homesteaded. Here he founded his mission and named the place Westphalia, in honor of the province in Germany by that name and from where the most of the settlers of that day had come. Permanent homes were established and in a few years the little log church, having become too small to accommodate the growing population, the movement for the establishment of a new church was inaugurated and in 1847 the corner stone for a new stone building was laid. Additions were built to it from time to time, the last being in 1906, under direction of the present pastor, Rev. F. A. Diepenbrock, the present large and imposing edifice representing the improvements made. The old log schoolhouse remained until 1886, when it was replaced by the present modern and substantial building.

The town was incorporated in 1905, the first mayor of the town being Henry A. Brune. The Westphalia Leader was founded by John H. Boss in 1894. Later the paper was acquired by Capt. Henry Castrop, its present editor, who changed its name, being now the Osage County Volksblatt. The town has a steam roller mill, established in 1893. In 1904 the Bank of Westphalia was organized with a capital of $10,000, which was subsequently increased to $20,000. Its first and present president and cashier are Gerhard Plassmeyer and Henry Westermann. In 1913 a second financial institution was established, the Farmers and Merchants Bank, with a capital stock of $10,000. Its president is Judge Ben Schauwecker and its cashier C. J. Buersmeyer. A high school department was added to the curriculum of the school in 1895.

The town of Westphalia is ideally situated. About it is fertile valley lands and streams that abound in fish. The town is located on a hill, somewhat lower than those that surround it, which presents an appearance of beauty in its outline. On account of its proximity to forest and stream and the hospitality of its people, the town is a Mecca for those in search of rest and recreation. The reputation of the town for cleanliness, for the substantial character of its business institutions, its wealth, its beautiful and comfortable homes particularly distinguish it.

The population of the town, according to the census of 1910, was 321.

CHAMOIS.

Chamois is located on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, nine miles west of the eastern boundary of the county. The Missouri river, forming the corporate limits on the north, adds beauty and picturesqueness to the city. The high and symmetrical hills on the south, which now form a part of the residential section of the city, afford an interesting view of the majestic stream which courses through the fertile valley below.

The early settlers were the Shobes, who entered the land that is now the site of Chamois in 1818. At that time the Missouri river channel was much farther north. Here, as elsewhere in the county, the stream, evincing a preference for Osage county soil, has encroached upon her territorial domain.

Morgan Harbor, who named the town and was one of the leading spirits in its development, built a double two-story log hotel and saloon north of the railroad track prior to 1855. This building was destroyed by fire in 1859. Andrew Fitzpatrick, Wheeler and Knott, P. and Thos. Green, Patrick Casey and John T. Hunter, were among the first to build houses in the town. The Masonic hall was built about 1856. The building, subsequently used as a church by the Catholic congregation, was erected for a storehouse by Welton and Hunter in 1858.

The town was laid out by James M. Shobe in 1856. The Bridges, Knotts, Townley & Knott's, Grangers, and Shobes additions were subsequently created. In 1873 the freight division, roundhouse, repair shop, coal chutes and stockyards were established. In 1896 the division was moved to Sedalia.

Of the city's institutions of a quasi public nature may be mentioned the Bank of Chamois, established in 1890; the Chamois Milling Company, incorporated in 1911; the Peoples' Bank, established in 1913, and the Osage County Enterprise, founded in 1888 by A. J. Childers. The city has two public schools, one of which is for colored children.

The Catholic Church was organized in 1865, the Methodist Church in 1868, the church for the colored people in 1872, the Christian Church in 1870, and the German Evangelical Church in 1885.

The fraternities are the Masonic Lodge, organized in 1859; K. of P. Lodge (now extinct), organized in 1885, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen (extinct), organized in 1880. Subsequently were organized the Maccabees, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Modern Brotherhood.

The population of the city, as given by the census of 1910, is 649.

OSAGE COUNTY COURT.

HISTORICAL.

March 25, 1841, the first session of the Osage County Court was held at the home of Thomas Robinson, at which time the municipal townships—Benton, Crawford, Jackson, Jefferson, Linn and Washington—were named and the boundaries designated. At the session of court held on that day it was ordered that the regular sessions of court be held on the second Monday in May and every three months thereafter.

May 10, 1841, the election of justices of the court was ordered, and subsequent terms of court ordered held at Elijah White's until otherwise ordered.

August 10, 1841, court convened at the home of Elijah White's.

August 27, 1842, court convened at Adolph Menger's, near Cave Springs.

November 4, 1842, court convened at Van Buren.

November 17, 1842, it was ordered that the county seat of Osage county be known, and styled as "Linnville."

May 9, 1843, it was ordered that all subsequent terms of court be held at Linn.

August 14, 1843, court convened for the first time at Linn.

The name "Linnville" was used but once in the records, nor was there ever any order entered of record changing the county seat from "Linnville" to Linn.

The insufficiency of the earlier records renders indefinite the exact dates when the earlier justices were chosen. All that is available from those records are the dates when the several justices served concurrently and the selection of one of their number as presiding justice, as was then provided for by law.

Economy in Telephone Service

It is not a question whether you can afford to have a telephone installed in your home; the question is, can you afford to be without one? Time is saved and service immediately commanded by use of the telephone. In case of a severe injury or serious sickness the quick service to be obtained by use of the telephone may save the life of some member of the family. You would not be sordid enough to attempt to compute the value in dollars and cents of such service. If you live on the farm and have urgent need for repairs for broken machinery or need any of the household necessities, the telephone furnishes you quick and economical service. Count the cost of hitching up your team, the wear and tear on your vehicles and your time and its value and see if you can afford to be without a telephone. Of course, if you have not now, you will later have a telephone in your home. But why not keep abreast with progress and have it installed NOW? We furnish you connection with hundreds of homes in town and country in Franklin, Gasconade, Osage, Cole and Callaway counties, beside long distant service over the Bell and Kinloch systems.

Catholics of Osage County:

Here are the REASONS why you ought to be continual readers, subscribers and staunch supporters of

THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY

(ENGLISH) and

Amerikanisches Familienblatt

BECAUSE

1. Both are choice Catholic family magazines. In each number (monthly, 48 pages) something for everybody.
2. Both are always timely, always Catholic, always American.
3. Both are highly interesting and instructing, beautifully and artistically illustrated.
4. Their special features are articles of missionaries from all over the world.
5. The proceeds are for the missions, and for the support of candidates for the priesthood and missionary career.
6. They are inexpensive monthlies—each only one dollar a year.

Have you a son or a daughter, a father or mother, a relative or a friend who is not keeping "The Christian Family" or the "Amerikanisches Familienblatt?" Send us their addresses that a few sample copies may be mailed to them. Better yet, ask them to subscribe. Become our agent if there is none in your locality. See to it that either of the monthlies enters every Catholic home in your vicinity. Every new subscriber means practical help for the support of the Catholic Press and indirectly for the cause of Church and Country.

The State Normal School

WARRENSBURG, MO.

This school is better equipped than ever before to meet the needs of every class of students.

It offers a Rural School Certificate course to graduates of rural schools, elective courses for graduates of four-year high schools, and advanced professional courses for graduates of colleges and universities preparing to be teachers.

It gives excellent opportunities for vocational training. While the purpose of a Normal School is primarily to train teachers, this school gives the preparation necessary for a life's work in any calling.

The expenses are lower than in any other school of equal rank. This is the only Normal School in the middle west that furnishes virtually free text books.

The Fall Quarter begins September 10th, the Winter Quarter, December 2nd.
